Attorney Channing M. Burd is an adaptable agribusiness and real estate attorney who supports the change-makers in the agricultural sphere through innovation, efficiency, and creation of long-term plans to be pivotal to economic growth and sustainability around the world.

Channing works with Agricultural Producers, Agribusiness Leaders and Executives, Investors, and Entrepreneurs to navigate federal regulations as they pertain to their operation and the everchanging regulatory field. He understands the problems that his clients face regarding cost of supplies and equipment, supply chain issues, as well as environmental issues.

Channing stays abreast of the regulatory affairs surrounding agriculture and food law. He helps his clients with contract review regarding procurement and third-party contractors to minimize loss. He also assists in guiding his clients through business planning and counseling to not only protect personal and business assets, but also to help plan for the next generation of producers to transition into the family business.
